Baggeridge is an interesting little area which combines land reclaimed from the old coal mine with mature woods. It's just about big enough to fit a blue course into without excessive repetition.

The recent combination of very hot and wet weather had induced the undergrowth to shoot up and a bit of gardening was necessary on the morning. The mapped path to Blue #18/Green #16 does exist, but it wasn't obvious from the road – I hope my alternative cut path through the nettles was of use and nobody got stung more than I did.

Control 108 (Yellow #1/Orange #2) decided that it was in a different time zone from all the others and produced some strange split times or reported missing punches for early starters who got to it before the box was replaced.

Thanks to John, Ian, Dave and Robert for control collecting.
