It was good to see Andy and Penny again, between their European and South American trips. The medium course produced the usual close competition, with Colin just winning, despite spending the day mapping on Brown Clee. One potential competitor never found the start. Apparently, he knew that Andy's was only 200m from a railway station. Having got out at Erdington, he spent a fruitless time searching the streets for Hunton Hill. He did not realize that the station near Andy's is Gravelly Hill!
