This event coincided with the 30th anniversary (to the day) of the Organiser's very first foray into the magical world of orienteering, so there was something of a celebratory air about the proceedings. Birthday cake was on offer, and Brian Hughes generously produced a bottle of bubbly to warm up the evening (though perhaps this was his attempt to befuddle the Organiser's brain into under-calculating his run time). Competitors were puzzled as to why they were required to determine the name of the licensee of a certain pub; but having navigated to the correct spot they discovered that he shared the same name as the Organiser!

Well done to the winners (John Embrey, Barry Houghton and Geoffrey Foster) who accurately and speedily sorted out the various route choice problems on offer.
