When I first started mapping the area I was concerned that the courses may have to be forced through a “pinch point”, as I was only aware of one crossing point on the old canal and Bourne brook, between major roads to east and west. However, I was pleasantly surprised to find three others. This certainly helped my objective to provide route choice on as many legs as possible. On the Long and Medium courses this included the option of short cuts across various parks, and on the Long the optimum route on one leg took the runners through Harbourne graveyard.

Once again, competition was particularly tight on the Medium course, with only 4 minutes separating 4 runners. Well in front of these four was Tessa, though she made it difficult for herself when she was distracted by seeing Richard on her final leg and turning down one road too soon, adding 0.75km to her run !
