The memory map exercise enabled me to get faster courses out of a limited area without too much grovelling through bramble and bracken. Competitors seemed to enjoy the novelty of this, although lack of practice on memory map proved a bit challenging in a few instances. A rather depleted turnout was not helped by a miserable weather forecast that didn't actually materialise until the last half hour of the event and the fact that HOC chose to put on a committee meeting on the same evening – a bit dispiriting when you expect the club to offer support; not to be staging rival activities. Overall I think that those who did make it to Old Hills had a good evening and, looking at the times, value for money!
