It was a lovely afternoon as I went round putting out controls – I could have done with the extra half-hour I had to spend sorting out a problem at work before I left, but everything was out in good time and the clear weather meant it stayed light until almost 6 o'clock.

I printed 30 maps and we had 27 participants including Peter shadowing Kieran. As Habberley Valley is too small to hold a Level C or above, we managed to attract a few visitors who hadn't been here at all or for many years.

Even with a couple of loops and a double-sided map, it's difficult to get much more than a 5km course in and the planner has to rely on a few controls high up on the sides to challenge the quicker runners. David Williams breezed it, clearing the lot with five minutes to spare. Chris and Rom also cleared the course, but in 71 minutes. In the women's competition, Mandy tied with Eloise with 150 points each.

Apologies to those who wasted time looking for #9. When putting out I came to it from #4 and found what I thought were the three thickets in a row with the one to the south. And thanks to control collectors Richard, Robert R, Barry H, John, Rom and Ben.
